FOREWORD by CONOR LASTOWKA & SEAN THOMASON

Imagine someone trying to pitch Peanuts today. A mild-mannered cartoonist somehow makes his way into the office of a major media conglomerate: lords of industry in search of the next billion-dollar entertainment and merchandising mother lode of an intellectual property. "What's it about?" asks one of the wall of executives who refuse to make eye contact.

"Well, there's this kid," the cartoonist replies. "He's CONSTANTLY depressed; in fact, he frequently seeks psychiatric help from another kid. She's really cruel to him, though. Actually all the kids are. His best friend is into philosophy and suffers from a crippling addiction to holding his blanket — should I keep going?"

The sound of an irritated Senior VP crumpling his plastic water bottle fills the air. "What's, ah, what's the first strip about?" he asks, not bothering to mask the seething rage he feels at having his time wasted.

"Oh it's great! Sweet Charlie Brown is skipping down the street, not a care in the world, and the other kids are nice to his face and then once he's out of sight, one says to another, 'How I hate him.'"

The silence that follows can only mean one thing — not only will Peanuts never see the light of day, whoever arranged this meeting has already been fired.

As the cartoonist is shown the door, he takes one last shot: "Did I mention he has a lovable dog?"

"Oh? A cute animal?" they ask as they pull him back in. "That sounds like something that might appeal to the lucrative kid's demographic. What's the dog do?"

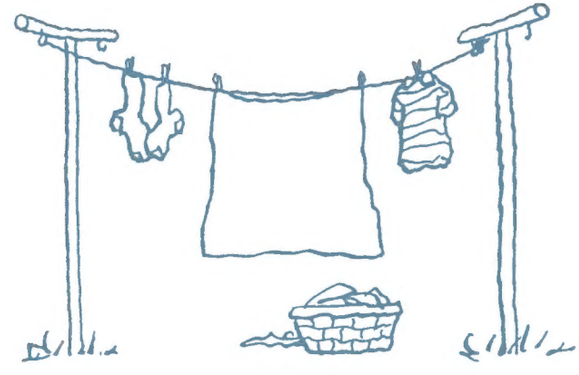
"Well, for one he dresses up like a WWI pilot, and leads a beer hall in singing 'It's A Long Way To Tipperary.'"

"We're not validating his parking. In fact, have his car towed," the executive instructs his assistant.

"But wait!" the cartoonist wails as he struggles to escape the vice grip of the two goons who appeared out of nowhere and are now shoving him towards the elevator. "There's a Christmas special, sure to be a beloved holiday staple enjoyed by families every year!"



"Hm... Holiday entertainment is a big moneymaker. That sounds like something we could get behind. What's the gist?"

"Our main character suffers a string of humiliations, and then someone recites a Bible passage verbatim."

"Have his family deported!"

"Sir, he's a citizen, he's from Minnesota!"

"Do as I say!"

But, luckily for us, someone at the syndicate took a chance on Peanuts. From the humblest of beginnings, Sparky's spark grew into a wildfire. But, y'know, if a wildfire was good. Okay, forget the metaphor: Peanuts satisfied readers on a small, intimate level, but its reach and cultural impact were anything but.

And as it grew in popularity, it only got more specific and strange. When you're coming up with a new idea for a comic every day for fifty years, how could it not? That's how you wind up with kite-eating trees, and a child pianist who carries signs counting down the days that remain until Beethoven's birthday. The terrifying, unseen Head Beagle who rules the canine world with an iron fist. Snoopy's siblings, including a tubby one named Olaf rarely seen outside Japan — where his merchandise is almost as popular as Snoopy's.

These weird little subplots and details of the Peanutverse have always delighted us to no end. How did Charlie Brown's baseball hero Joe Shlabotnik keep getting at bats as his average dipped to .004? Where did Miss Othmar get her teaching degree? How much did Snoopy pay for his Van Gogh? Did Linus and Lucy resent their mother for never taking them bike riding as she did with Rerun? Did Frieda's cat Faron technically possess a skeletal structure?

At RiffTrax, we often entertain each other by digging into pop culture mysteries like these. RiffTrax continues the work started at Mystery Science Theater 3000: we take a movie and fill it with jokes, a comedy commentary that runs alongside the film. When you need more than seven hundred jokes per movie, you wind up pulling your material from every source you can think of. Sometimes it's a highbrow allusion to Moby-Dick. More often, it's a crack about Jaws IV: The Revenge. MUCH more often.

When we're in the writing room, there are often moments where one of us will make a reference and receive nothing but blank stares. It's bound to happen with writers of different backgrounds and generations working together. A joke about how a character resembles Doug McClure, the character actor best known for playing Trampas in the '60s series The Virginian, might fly over the heads of half the room. Whereas the other half might roll their eyes in frustration when a joke hinges on knowing which Ninja Turtle was "cool but rude."

But of course the goal is always to make EVERYONE laugh. Unfortunately there aren't many references that work for all ages and backgrounds. Even if a zombie in Night of the Living Dead is a perfect doppelganger of Doug McClure (bet you didn't expect to read his name twice today) you can bet your Sweet Babboo you'll get a bigger laugh pointing out that his undead staggering looks like the Peanuts gang dancing to Vince Guaraldi's iconic tune in A Charlie Brown Christmas — even more so if you hum a bit of it in a zombie groan.

That's because — despite the gloomy, quirky, sometimes just plain weird nature of the strip that scared off our imaginary executives — Schulz's comic achieved a level of multigenerational adoration that only a handful of other artists have ever matched. Let's put it this way: Snoopy had his own Sno-Cone machine. Even the Beatles never got a Sno-Cone machine.

So, thanks for providing the kind of cultural glue that makes our job a little easier and a lot more fun, Mr. Schulz. We hope that, just as we found and devoured yellowed paperback Peanuts collections in our grandparents' homes, books like this one will find their way into the hands of kids decades from now. And they'll laugh at the strips, fall in love with the characters, and, if they bother to read this introduction, be EXTREMELY confused about who Doug McClure was.

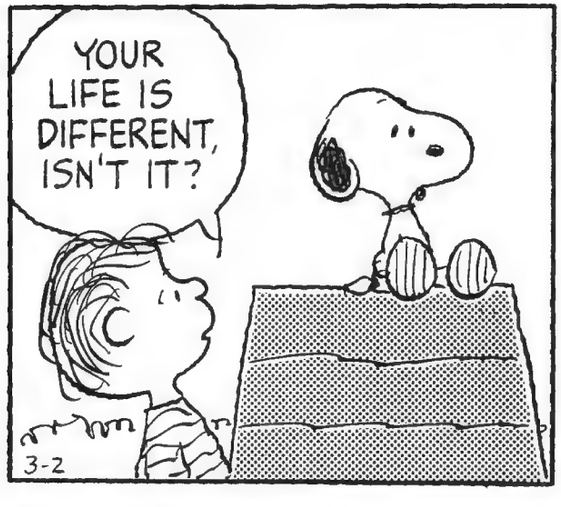
On the following pages, our RiffTrax colleagues Mike Nelson, Kevin Murphy, and Bill Corbett have, for the first time ever, riffed comic strips. Please enjoy their commentary on some of the strips from this collection.

"Actually, she said 'Mwah wah mwahh' but I took it as a 'No.'"

"What kind of a freak dog does THAT?"

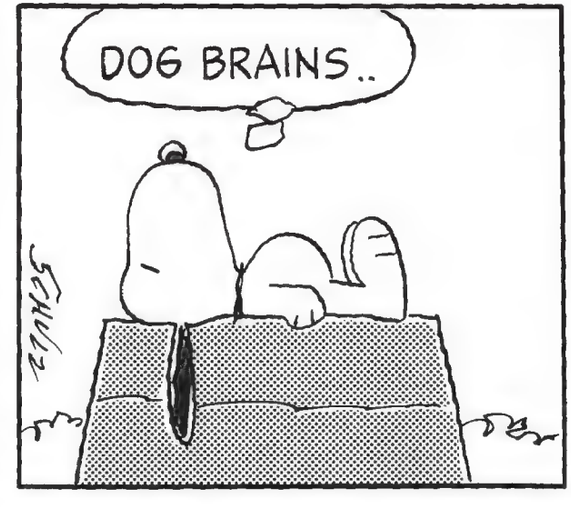
Poor sequel... I mean redo... I mean...

Snoopy replies by invoking his favorite Costa-Gavras movie.



"You're a dog but you walk on two legs and dance like Ed Grimley, what gives?"

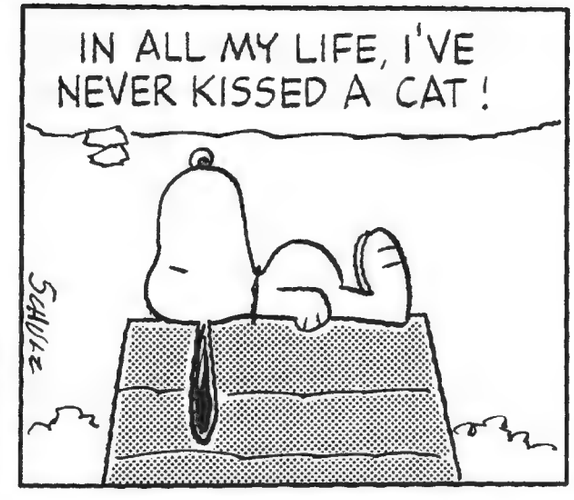
"How do you cope with the blanketless nightmare you call a life?"



The Head Beagle knows a guy who can get them fresh.

"Am I my brother in a black wig?"

"I'm a DOG who WRITES NOVELS, what more do you want of me?!"



Snoopy was always going out of his way to claim that, for some reason.

The title of a much darker Peanuts Halloween special.

"You're really losing it Linus, everyone's getting worried."

"...upset that after forty years Linus still calls me 'your dog' instead of Snoopy."

CHARLES M. SCHULZ · 1922 TO 2000

Charles M. Schulz was born November 26, 1922, in Minneapolis. His destiny was foreshadowed when an uncle gave him, at the age of two days, the nickname "Sparky" (after the racehorse Spark Plug in the newspaper strip Barney Google).

Schulz grew up in St. Paul. By all accounts, he led an unremarkable, albeit sheltered, childhood. He was an only child, close to both parents. His eventual career path was nurtured by his father, who bought four Sunday papers every week — just for the comics.

An outstanding student, he skipped two grades early on, but began to flounder in high school — perhaps not so coincidentally at the same time kids are going through their cruelest, most status-conscious period of socialization. The pain, bitterness, insecurity, and failures chronicled in Peanuts appear to have originated from this period of Schulz's life.

Although Schulz enjoyed sports, he also found refuge in solitary activities: reading, drawing, and watching movies. He bought comic books and Big Little Books, pored over the newspaper strips, and copied his favorites — Buck Rogers, the Walt Disney characters, Popeye, Tim Tyler's Luck. He quickly became a connoisseur; his heroes were Milton Caniff, Roy Crane, Hal Foster, and Alex Raymond.

In his senior year in high school, his mother noticed an ad in a local newspaper for a correspondence school, Federal Schools (later called Art Instruction Schools). Schulz passed the talent test, completed the course, and began trying, unsuccessfully, to sell gag cartoons to magazines. (His first published drawing was of his dog, Spike, and appeared in a 1937 Ripley's Believe It or Not! installment.)

After World War II had ended and Schulz was discharged from the army, he started submitting gag cartoons to the various magazines of the time; his first breakthrough, however, came when an editor at Timeless Topix hired him to letter adventure comics. Soon after that, he was hired by his alma mater, Art Instruction, to correct student lessons returned by mail.

Between 1948 and 1950, he succeeded in selling 17 cartoons to the Saturday Evening Post — as well as, to the local St. Paul Pioneer Press, a weekly comic feature called Li'l Folks. It ran in the women's section and paid $10 a week. After writing and drawing the feature for two years, Schulz asked for a better location in the paper or for daily exposure, as well as a raise. When he was turned down on all three counts, he quit.

He started submitting strips to the newspaper syndicates. In the spring of 1950, he received a letter from the United Feature Syndicate, announcing its interest in his submission, Li'l Folks. Schulz boarded a train in June for New York City; more interested in doing a strip than a panel, he also brought along the first installments of what would become Peanuts — and that was what sold. (The title, which Schulz loathed to his dying day, was imposed by the syndicate). The first Peanuts daily appeared October 2, 1950; the first Sunday, January 6, 1952.

Prior to Peanuts, the province of the comics page had been that of gags, social and political observation, domestic comedy, soap opera, and various adventure genres. Although Peanuts changed, or evolved, during the 50 years Schulz wrote and drew it, it remained, as it began, an anomaly on the comics page — a comic strip about the interior crises of the cartoonist himself. After a painful divorce in 1973 from which he had not yet recovered, Schulz told a reporter, "Strangely, I've drawn better cartoons in the last six months — or as good as I've ever drawn. I don't know how the human mind works." Surely, it was this kind of humility in the face of profoundly irreducible human questions that makes Peanuts as universally moving as it is.

Diagnosed with cancer, Schulz retired from Peanuts at the end of 1999. He died on February 12, 2000, the day before his last strip was published (and two days before Valentine's Day) — having completed 17,897 daily and Sunday strips, each and every one fully written, drawn, and lettered entirely by his own hand — an unmatched achievement in comics.
